A GREEN OLD AGE.

Actresses Who Have Been Playing Over Fifty Years.

THEY TAKE OLD WOMEN PARTS.

Two Generations Ago Tney Were Charming Juliets, Virginias and Rosalinds-Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Drew and Mrs. Gilbert.

Therefore take with thee my most grievous curs Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;

rves thy life, and doth thy death attend. After delivering this terrible curse upon her son the Duchess of York leaves the stage and is seen no more in the evening's representation of "Richard III."

The bill of the play in Mr. Thomas Keene's production of the tragedy contains this line: "Duchess of York, Mrs. Baker," The audience sees a majestic and effective woman in ence sees a majestic and effective woman in the part, it is thrilled by the intensity and force with which the lines quoted above are delivered, and leaves, when the curtain drops on the death of the terrible and relentless hunchback, without knowing that it has witnessed something worth remembering wholly apart from the impressions of the personal pleasure would have come had those present been aware of the fact that the lady playing the nine made an unsuccessful finesse, playing the nine that had bad when I also held it knave, and the ten was at my left. At this my partner's ire broke forth. He threw down his cards in a violent fit of anger and, stamping his feet, he exclatmed: "By gad, sir, you are the most stapid player I ever saw. You ought to throw yourself overboard."

The most exasperating type of whist player to meet is the one who has read a few whist been aware of the fact that the lady playing been aware of the fact that the lady playing the Duchess of York so well, in point of conwas the manager of the Pittsburg theatre, and her associations from childhood have been those of the stage. As leading lady of Philadelphia and New York stock companies she has in days that are gone supported such famous stars as Edwin Forrest, the elder Booth, Edwin Adams, E. L. Davenport, Lawrence Barrett, Edwin Booth, Joseph Jef-ferson, W. J. Florence, the elder Sothern and Stuart Robson, playing an infinite va-riety of characters and making her mark as an exponent of legitimate drama. When 34 years old she married, but her husband's creditable career as an actor was cut short by death, Mr. Baker being killed at Atlanta, Ga., while serving as an officer in Sherman's

In 1887 Mrs. Baker completed her fiftieth year as an actress, and the event was made the occasion of a notable commemoration. It was at the Masonic Temple theatre in Louis-ville, Ky. Richard III had just died, but the certain did not go down. Instead the audience was requested to remain. Mrs. Baker, still dressed as the Duchess, was led to the center of the stage and given a seat. Then, with a diamond ring and various floral tributes, the following address was handed her by Mr. Keene:

To our Dear Professional Mother, Mrs. Sarah A. Baker, on the Semi-Centennial of Her Debut on

We, the members of Mr. Keene's company, deem it to be our happy privilege and respectful duty to charge this day with a token of dear remembershee of you, not less as an actress than as a cherished friend, as a mother whose ministering hand has ever been tenderly tendered whenever occasion domanded its care.

OBSERVATIONS ON WHIST.

the Course of Travel. The writer of a book on whist which has but recently been published, and which I should be glad to give the name of to my readers, as it is really an excellent book, were it not for the fact that I do not desire any fame as an advertising agent—the writer of this book, let me observe, has taken occasion to speak contemptuously of railroad whist, and I must confess to a feeling of sympathy with him in the evident sincerity of his dis-gust at the player you meet in the smoking sissippi river on a boat, and having ample leisure the passengers organized a whist table. My partner was a gruff old Englishman, who had imbited just enough of the principles of "Cavendish" to make him, if anything, a "Cavendish" to make him, it anything, a worse player than if he had resorted more to his own natural intelligence. For two days we played together, and it was as much as the old gentleman (f) could do to restrain himself at what he considered my stupid play. Near the close of the second day's play I made an unsuccessful finesse, playing the nine third hand when I also held the knave, and

He would finesse precisely at the wrong time, and his knowledge of unblocking was so uncertain that he was sure to get tangled up and fall helpless at the most criti-I made up my mind that in whist, as in life, "a little learning is a dangerous thing," and my experience is that the man who studies the game for its own sub-trail

To be explicit, Mrs. Sarah A. Baker is now 73 years of age, and has been an actress for reasoning with a thorough knowledge of the reasoning with a thorough with a thorough knowledge of the reasoning with a thorough knowledge of the reasoning with a thorough knowledge of the reasoning laws of the game. The great difficulty is that people have not the time to devote to the study of the game.

They will pass hour upon hour playing enchre, casino, hearts, seven up and like games, and, indeed, they will play what is termed railroad whist, but the idea of making a study of the game is to them absurd and ridiculous, and yet, as one who has played all which affords so much pleasure as whist, New situations are constantly crowding to the whist player. Let those who would learn the game study it in its entirety, and as they grow older in it they will find that it will become one of the keenest intellectual pleasures of their lives.

Vanderbilt Planting Trees on His Estate. One hundred and twenty acres have been plowed up and planted with white pines, which have been arranged in rows seven feet apart, with a space of five feet between the trees in the same row. This makes 1,200 trees to the acre. The young trees are from fifteen to eighteen inches in height and are obtained from a nurs ery near Chicago. The white pines which have been set out on the slopes where the timber has been cut down take one year to root themselves firmly in the soil. The second year they grow about one foot higher, and every succeeding year they receive an additional upward growth of three feet or more. In three years from the time of planting they will be at least six feet in height, and in this climate will attain a maximum height of 150 feet. The idea in planting them so closely together is to make them grow very tall and prevent them from putting
